A NEW venture to reduce waste and recycle cooking oil has been launched by Haringey Council.

Used cooking oil from care homes will be recycled into environmentally friendly biofuel as part of the council's commitment to reducing waste and cutting carbon by 40 per cent by 2015.

The council is considering rolling out the service to other community buildings if the pilot with recycling firm Renewergy is successful.

Entrepreneur David Millward set up Renewergy in 2008 after a two-year battle with cancer.

It specialises in turning food waste and used cooking oil into biofuel for heating and biodiesel for vehicles.

Reuse: Clarice Ducille, from Osborne Grove Care Home, is pictured helping Renewergy's David Millward with the new cooking oil recycling service

Burglary trio jailed

A TOTTENHAM man is among a gang of three jailed for a spate of distraction burglaries across London targeting elderly and vulnerable people.

Jonathon McCarthy, 21, of Bream Close, was jailed for three years and four months at Snaresbrook Crown Court last Wednesday after a guilty plea.

During the burglaries, which were carried out last November, McCarthy, claimed he was a builder working next door and was checking for water leaks.

His brother, Patrick Collins, 29, of Maurice Bishop Terrace, View Road, Highgate, acted as "creeper", stealing more than £500 cash from a 78-year-old man and jewellery from another victim. He was sentenced to four years and three months in prison.

His father-in-law, Francis Gavin, 44, was the getaway driver and was jailed for two years and six months.

Life for teen's death

SERIF Aslan, of Philip Lane, South Tottenham, has been sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of 15-year-old Kasey Gordon with a recommendation to serve a minimum of 20 years.

The 34-year-old was also sentenced to seven years for two counts of GBH and to 12 months for one count of ABH following a five-week trial at the Old Bailey.

The diagnosed paranoid schizophrenic was found guilty at the same court in April and will be detained under the Mental Health Act.

Seven years for rape

A TOTTENHAM man has been jailed for seven years for rape and sexual assault.

Delroy Clive Gordon, 52, of Park Lane, was sentenced at Woolwich Crown Court last Friday after a unanimous jury decision following a seven-day trial in April.

MURDERER JAILED FOR RAMPAGE OF VIOLENCE

A HORNSEY man will serve a minimum of 35 years in prison after being found guilty of killing two pensioners following a five-week trial at Woolwich Crown Court.

Ali Koc, 30, of Lightfoot Road, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murders of 68-year-old Victor Parsons and Keith Needell, 84, as well as five counts of GBH during a month of violence in January last year.

Mr Parsons was attacked at about 10am on January 5 near Alexandra Palace. He sustained multiple and serious head injuries and was taken to the Royal London Hospital in east London. He remained in intensive care for several weeks before he died on February 25.

On January 21, Koc headbutted and punched a 29-year-old man walking his dog in the same area. Over the next three days he assaulted three men – aged 29, 36 and 35. In one of the attacks in Priory Park, the victim was beaten with a tree branch and racially abused.

Then, on January 28 and 29, he attacked a 63-year-old in Queens Wood, Muswell Hill, and a 59-year-old in Downhills Park, Tottenham.

Koc's final attack came at Queens Wood on January 31. His victim, Mr Needell, suffered serious head injuries and was in intensive care at the Royal Free Hospital before he died in July last year.

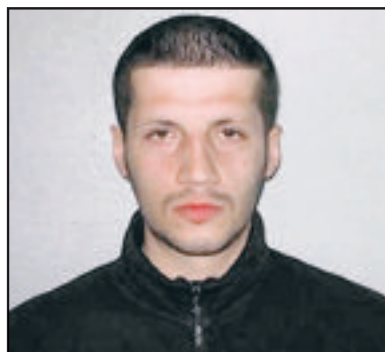

Koc was arrested and charged on February 2.

Senior investigating officer Detective Chief Inspector Tim Duffield said: "Koc has never shown any remorse for this wanton spate of attacks. There was no motive."

"This was simply violence for violence's sake, randomly inflicted on law-abiding people, who happened to be walking or jogging through their local parks. Tragically, two of society's most vulnerable members, Victor Parsons and Keith Needell, paid with their lives for being in the wrong place at the wrong time."

Mr Needell's wife, Mary, said: "Keith is greatly missed by all his family, friends and those whose lives he touched and enriched. Such a kind and gentle man should never have suffered in such a brutal and senseless manner."

"In 57 years of marriage he never once uttered a cross word. His aim in life was to help others

Jailed: Ali Koc will serve at least 35 years and contribute towards a better life for all. His interests in the wider world were many and varied and if he could see a way of helping others it would give him pleasure to do so in as unobtrusive a way as possible."

Detectives are not ruling out the possibility that Koc may have attacked other people. Anyone who thinks they may have been a victim should call the incident room on 020 8358 0400. If they wish to remain anonymous, they can call Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111.

MP de Bois lands leading role on Tory backbench

By Ruth McKee

ENFIELD North MP Nick de Bois has been elected as secretary of the influential group of backbench Conservative MPs – the 1922 Committee.

The group was given a shake-up this week after a change in the rules allowed frontbench MPs to vote in the election for officers for the first time, meaning pro-government Tories were more likely to scoop the top posts and force out those who have been giving Prime Minister David Cameron a tough time.

Mr de Bois is adamant he is neither a hard-line traditionalist nor a fervent moderniser and claims he was elected to the position because he “came through the middle, as it were”.

It has been reported the 53-year-old is broadly popular across the Conservative benches. “I cross both sides of the party,” the MP told the Advertiser.

Mr de Bois denied that the new “moderniser” make-up of the committee would stop him holding the government to account on issues that anger rank-and-file Tory MPs.

He said: “I see my job as secretary on the 1922 Committee as reporting backbench opinion to government in an open, honest and frank manner.

“We have to speak for the party. In my role as secretary I will reflect the views of the party and I will do just that,” he added.

Staffordshire Moorlands MP Karen Bradley, who has been labelled “a Cameron sympathiser”, will work alongside Mr de Bois as joint secretary of the committee.

...as burglars ransack constituency office

NICK de Bois’ constituency office was broken into and trashed over the weekend.

The Enfield North MP told the Advertiser that he found out about the burglary when a member of staff opened up the Hertford Road office on Monday morning and found it had been ransacked, with files and paperwork littering the floor.

“This was nothing more than twisted opportunism,” said Mr de Bois. “It’s the second time it’s happened – it happened six or nine months ago as well.”

The thieves broke in through the back gate, damaging brick work on the back wall in the process.

Mr de Bois admitted the vandals would have known it was his office but did not believe it was a personal attack on him.

He said: “I think they decided to go for this office because they thought we might have valuable equipment.”

Mr de Bois added that no personal information about any constituent had been stolen. He said: “We keep all case files on the computer and they were secured. But they destroyed paperwork.”

The MP ruled out ramping up security around the office, which is already protected by a security gate and metal grills.

He said the vandals “must have made a lot of noise” during the break-in, making him think that someone might have heard something.

Anyone with information about the burglary is asked to call police on the non-emergency number, 101.

Digging it: Tim Smit in the glasshouse with head gardener Andrew Turvey. Other guests included Andrew Parker Bowles, far left

Glasshouse restored to its Victorian glory

Pictures by Anne-Marie

By Ruth McKee

IT has taken nine months, hundreds of thousands of pounds of Lottery funding and hours of back-breaking labour – but last week the Victorian glasshouse at Myddelton House opened its doors to the public for the first time.

Until last year, the building's very existence in the heart of the gardens in Bulls Cross, Enfield, had been completely forgotten. And the wilderness that at one stage threatened to engulf the gardens had hidden the foundations of the glasshouse from view until a gut feeling led head gardener Andrew Turvey to start digging.

After pouring over a few faint photographs, a team of architects, builders and gardeners began the painstaking restoration project that finally ended last week.

Tim Smit, co-founder of the Eden Project, in Cornwall, cut the vine ribbon to officially open the glasshouse to public view.

Mr Smit, who is known for his futuristic ecological projects, told the Advertiser: "This is incredibly valuable – it is almost a window into the soul of a man."

"And it is wonderful of the Lee Valley Park to make sure access to this is free for anyone."

The glasshouse has a sunken area where potatoes and melons are grown, as well as a hothouse and a vine house.

Speaking before slicing through the vines looped in front of the glasshouse doors with antique secateurs, Mr Smit told the invited guests that the restoration work at Myddelton House was such a success as a truly beautiful garden is judged on whether "you can get drunk in it, dream in it or make love in it".

The celebrated entrepreneur, who was part of the team that restored The Lost Gardens of Heligan in Cornwall, added that gardeners and horticulturalists were indebted to the great eccentrics like the man responsible for Myddelton House, EA Bowles, who was one of the leading botanists and plantsman of his era.

His great nephew, Andrew Parker Bowles, attended last week's opening.

'If jobs fair gets even one person off benefits it's worth it'

MP ANDY Love is hosting his first jobs fair tomorrow in a bid to tackle youth unemployment.

Edmonton-based firms and training and employment agencies have been invited to Edmonton Leisure Centre, in The Broadway, Edmonton Green, for the event, which takes place from 10am to 2pm.

Unemployment in Edmonton has reached the highest levels since the 1990s, with 10.6 per cent of people out of work.

Mr Love, the MP for Edmonton has invited 250 firms to the fair.

He said: "I'm aware that a jobs fair isn't going to solve unemployment in Enfield overnight, but if it gets just one person into work and off benefits then it will have been worth it."

"We have reached crisis levels of unemployment locally and there is a role for everyone – from the government down to local employers and training organisations – to play in addressing the problem.

"I hope this jobs and training fair will go some way to boosting levels of employment as well as meeting local businesses' recruitment needs."

"There are jobs out there and I want to make sure that people from Enfield have an opportunity to take them up."

Warning over training scams

By Kim Inam

JOBSEEKERS are being advised to be cautious when signing up to training schemes, after a rise in the number of people being duped by "scam" training centres.

Enfield's Citizens Advice Bureau (CAB), based in Vincent House, Nags Head Road, Ponders End, receives on average three calls a week from people who have signed up to courses, with some promising jobs that never materialise.

Many keen trainees often end up out of pocket after they take our career development loans to pay for course fees which can mount up to several thousands of pounds.

Enfield CAB chief executive Sonia Kotecha said: "We are seeing more cases involving the promise of a job at the end, and this is a particularly despicable scam when so many people have been made redundant and are desperate for work.

"Problems have been reported with a wide range of courses, including plumbing, IT and for home energy assessors."

Last year there were 2,566 complaints about personal development reported to the CAB across the country.

Complaints are often unresolved as the firms go into liquidation.

For anyone thinking of attending a training course, Enfield CAB advises people to check the validity of adverts and that the course is suitable and offered by a bona fide company, ensure that the address and phone numbers are genuine and be aware of cancellation rights.

Work for Spurs – for a year and also unpaid...

By Ruth McKee

TOTTENHAM Hotspur Football Club has come under fire after advertising for a year-long unpaid intern in the club's PR department.

The advert, which appeared on the University of Sussex jobs board, says the "ideal candidate" will live locally to the club's new training ground in Bulls Cross, Enfield, and will work in the "thriving" press office, without a wage, for the entire 2012/13 football season.

But the club, which finished fourth in the Premier League last season, has been branded a "disgrace" by Spurs fan and veteran NUJ campaigner and TUC treasurer Mick Gosling, who has worked extensively in top-flight corporate communications.

He said: "There is no way it can be justified – not even paying minimum wage – whereas the top stars are getting salaries of tens of thousands of pounds a week. How can that be justified?

"These young people have struggled hard to make a career for themselves. They go to college and are then faced with this Hobson's choice of working for nothing and getting nothing. This is an absolute disgrace."

Enfield North MP Nick de Bois, who organised a jobs fair in the borough in February, said internships were a common way of getting experience but expressed surprise at the duration of the placement.

He said: "I am surprised at the length of this particular one on offer as three months is a more usual time period."

Companies have been slammed by unions before for using desperate job-seekers in this way, but the practice does not breach employment regulations.

According to the Department For Business, Innovation And Skills, unless workers are in receipt of the minimum wage and under contract, they do not benefit from the same rights as employees.

But Spurs, who have thousands of loyal supporters across north London, are adamant the internship is the ideal opportunity for a college leaver or graduate.

A spokesman from the club said: "The THFC communications department offers a unique opportunity for a young person, college leaver or graduate to spend a season experiencing the working environment of our media operations, learning valuable skills that will provide a platform for future employment opportunities either within the club or elsewhere in the industry."

"For the successful applicant, a package is offered in order to cover, living, travel and accommodation expenses over the duration of the placement."

Games security firm offers contracts to 79 people

A FIRM has employed 79 people who attended a jobs fair organised by MP Nick de Bois in Enfield in February.

G4S, the company contracted to provide security at the London 2012 Olympic Games, interviewed 104 applicants at the jobs fair at Southbury Leisure Centre.

And of those, the firm awarded contracts to 79 people.

Enfield North MP Mr de Bois said: "I'm delighted that the Enfield Jobs Fair has made a difference – it's great news for the 79 people who have got a job with G4S."

"As an MP I'm not able to create jobs, but I can bring together companies looking for staff and people looking for work, and I'm pleased it's worked."

Some 1,600 people attended the five-hour jobs fair, which was opened by Mayor of London Boris Johnson.

It also hosted recruiters from BT, Sainsbury's, Capel Manor College and Winchmore Brickwork.

Walkers cross the road at Southgate Circus

HUNDREDS of people donned flashing bunny ears, their pyjamas and slippers for a 15-kilometre night hike through Enfield on Friday.

The walk through the streets of Enfield, Southgate, Palmers Green and Winchmore Hill is expected to have raised thousands of pounds for the Nightingale Cancer Support Centre, in Lancaster Road, Enfield, and Barnet and Chase Farm Hospital Trust.

Residents, workers and councillors joined in the fun, along with Enfield Southgate MP David Burrowes, who donned a pair of Margaret Thatcher slippers for the occasion.

in drizzle, the hikers stopped off at Asda in Southgate for refreshments and at the Intimate Theatre in Palmers Green for a rejuvenating massage and cupcakes, which helped them make it across the finish line at the civic centre in Enfield Town.

Joan Kearns, chief executive of the Nightingale Centre, said her favourite part was when she crossed the line with the back of the pack.

She said: "Finishing with the last participants it was lovely knowing that everybody enjoyed themselves and were still smiling even though it was hard work."

"The event was a great success thanks to the help of the 40 marshals and volunteers on the night. We could not have done the event without them."

She urged participants to chase up their sponsorship money in the hope that the hike will beat last year's grand total of more than £23,000.

The ENFIELD ADVERTISER COMMENT

Not a dry eye in revamped house

THERE could hardly have been a dry eye in any household across the borough last Wednesday night when the long-awaited DIY SOS screening of the revamp of Eric and Davina Rivers' home was broadcast on BBC 1.

This family has totally captured the hearts of our news team, from the beginning when we published appeals for help from tradesmen, to reporting on what we were permitted to by the Beeb of the build, and now about fundraisers for a family trust fund.

And it's clear from last week's programme that the Rivers family are firmly entrenched in the hearts of their community and friends.

But the amazing transformation of the two-bedroom house, which Eric admits has helped keep him alive, almost did not happen because the family home was too small.

When the production and building team originally visited the couple's house, the application was rejected on the grounds it would be too difficult to achieve.

But thanks to the persistent lobbying by the couple's friends, who took to tweeting the programme's frontman Nick Knowles, a second visit was arranged and compassion shone through.

The one-hour broadcast did not mask the fact that it was a difficult task.

There were many references to the size of the terraced house, which was virtually gutted in the process, and the difficulty of having so many kind-hearted volunteers in such a tight space.

But the end result made such a huge difference to the family home that only the most flinty-hearted viewer would not be inspired by the camaraderie and generosity of the volunteers and team.

There are many others whose stories go untold, so let us be inspired by the story of the Rivers family and their friends and not become blind to those who are in need.

We're working hard to get every child a place

THE entry of David Burrowes into the debate about school places is understandable (MP's column, Advertiser, May 16).

However, to say that the council has not provided enough places and that we are "burying our heads in the sand" is just not true.

This council is determined to offer a place to every child of statutory school age for this September, and as cabinet member for schools and children, that is my personal goal.

Like many other London boroughs, Enfield is experiencing an unprecedented demand for places.

We have recognised the need for additional primary school places and we are committed to implementing the expansion programme.

For September, we have created an additional 346 reception places and are on course to create a further 60 very shortly.

By September 2012 the council's administration will have provided an additional total of 1,878 places since May 2010 when elected.

School expansion requires us to invest in extra classrooms and facilities to accommodate increased year groups as children move through the school. This means extra toilets, kitchen and dining facilities and general improvements.

This is a major programme at a time when government support for basic needs is limited.

Through a combination of partner school arrangements, one-off extra classes and full expansions we have made great strides in developing more places this year.

We do have more places to develop in the west of the borough and I am confident that we shall resolve this very shortly.

In the first year of the

Determined:
Ayfer Orhan

Labour administration we increased school capacity. This year we have continued to extend existing primary schools and I am indebted to the many headteachers, their staff, school governors and parents for agreeing to take extra children and make them welcome.

Far from "burying our heads", as Mr Burrowes suggests, we are creating more primary school places and work is under way on our secondary school places strategy.

I call on him to back us fully and support school expansion where we identify need and potential solutions.

Safety card's meaning was lost behind sensationalism

ENFIELD'S new emergency card for vulnerable adults is a welcome support for many people, enabling them to travel independently and with confidence.

The card was launched last week in partnership with the health service, the police, Transport for London, potential users and their carers who worked hard developing it over the last two years.

Unfortunately you omitted this in your report of the launch, choosing instead to remark in a damaging headline that we had not consulted various disability groups ("Why did no one ask our opinion?" Advertiser, May 16).

This is untrue. In September 2010 the learning disabilities focus group, which includes Enfield Disability Action, One to One Enfield and carer representatives from CAPE (Carers and Parents Enfield), was informed about the card and invited to comment on its development.

The chairperson of the Carer to Carer Network originally had the idea for the card and also ensured that members of that group were involved in its progress.

Full consultations took place with our partners and users. This card works in a positive way to promote confidence among many people.

In your comment column you also state that the council could have extended the borough boundaries, and you ask what use the card would be in Bromley or even Barnet. You seem to have missed the point. If a card carrier is stranded, lost or needs emergency help anywhere, the phone number on the card will direct anyone offering assistance to services in Enfield.

It is a pity that the Advertiser's usual reliable reporting is wide of the mark, finding unnecessary sensationalism in a headline and misunderstanding the intention of the card.

Lift embargo in Cyprus

RE: "MP rebuts bias claim over Cyprus mission" (Advertiser, May 9).

My parents, Turkish Cypriots, moved to England in the 1960s after years of torture and being treated by many Greek Cypriots as second-class citizens in their own country.

The Greeks called this EOKA (Unity with Greece). The mainland Turks came over in 1974 to stop the nine years of killing by the Greeks and Greek Cypriots which they call the invasion.

The Turkish Cypriots have lived on the island for generations and are still suffering today with the embargo. Cyprus is just as much a Turkish island as it is a Greek island.

I was born in the UK and my parents have always raised me to respect everyone, regardless of race, religion or gender, and I do.

The embargo should be lifted and MP David Burrowes should acknowledge that the treatment in the north is unjustified.

Church school system unfair

I HAVE friends whose children have no school place for September even though they live a one-minute walk away from their nearest school, which happens to be a church school.

When will the unjust system of church schools be exposed?

At present, parents attend church for a couple of years so that they can sign the church register in order to get their child into the school linked to the church. But the church schools should serve the local community, ie if you live close to the school you get a place there if you want one.

What is happening is that these schools are full of children who live quite far away from the school and have to travel by car, when they have schools nearer to them the parents seem to think are not good enough.

Schools should be for those who live the closest, not for those who pretend to be religious. Religion should be a subject taught at school, not the criteria for school entry.

Dancing is a great cure for the blues

I AM writing to thank our wonderful team of doctors, nurses and all the staff at the Woodberry Practice.

They not only are a dedicated, caring and brilliant bunch of people but they can also still find time to have fun.

On Saturday, to celebrate 100 years since the start of the practice, they invited all their patients to a tea dance at the church hall and laid on tea and cakes and entertainment, too.

What a lovely afternoon!

Thank you so much, Dr Jane Selwood and all your colleagues. We did enjoy it and what a great way to chase away the recession blues!

Environment matters

WAS disappointed, though not surprised, that David Cameron's claims for "the greenest government ever" went unrealised in the Queen's Speech.

Pledges to legislate for a green investment bank and to reform both the electricity market and the water industry are promising.

But without investment or plans for a low-carbon economy to address climate change, the proposals fall short of the rhetoric.

Equally disappointing, but less surprising, was the inactivity regarding economic growth.

Ecologically, because an increase in economic activity is commonly associated with the unsustainable consumption of finite natural resources, growth and sustainability are sometimes seen as conflicting interests.

However, enlightened government intervention can achieve sustainable economic growth, for instance by investment in a low-carbon economy.

Many companies hesitate to go green because of the short-term cost, eg of research and development, despite the long-term benefits.

The government can help with tax breaks or loans through the green investment bank, securing jobs, inward investment and pole position in the global low-carbon energy market, projected to be worth trillions of dollars.

Governments may also use their enormous purchasing power to deal only with companies that behave in environmentally, socially and fiscally responsible ways, as illustrated by Enfield Council's new procurement policy described in an earlier column.

Finally, it is accepted that wealthy consumers, per head, use far more of the world's resources than the rest.

In the UK, water consumption per head is far greater in the south-east than in the north-east (exacerbating the drought).

By increasing, rather than decreasing, the financial clout of millions of low-paid workers who need the means and the confidence to invest in their futures, the government could stimulate growth without overheating consumption.

Regrettably, the coalition prefers hands-off governance, reasoning that small state is better for environmental business.

I disagree.

THE government has provided an extra £10.7million to Enfield for primary school provision.

Yet if your only source of information were this council, you would have thought – given the bulge classes and massive shortage in school places – that Enfield's children had been ignored by the government.

Likewise, bold reforms in relation to special educational needs provision may go unnoticed.

The present system is outdated and not fit for purpose. Thousands of families have had to battle for months, even years, with different agencies to get the specialist care their children need.

It is unacceptable they are forced to go from pillar to post, facing delays and bureaucracy to get support, therapy and equipment.

It is a huge step forward to require health, education and care services to work together.

Even Chris Keates, general secretary of the NASUWT teaching union, has described the present system as bureaucratic.

The government's reforms will put parents in charge, giving you the power to control personal budgets for those of you whose children have severe, profound or multiple health and learning difficulties – meaning you can choose the expert support that is right for your child, instead of local authorities being the sole provider.

Michael Lavender

Enfield Conservative group leader

We trust you to do the right thing for your own child.

The reforms will also provide better information and bring services together to provide a package of support that meets their needs, removing the cliff edge at 16 and helping young people into work and living as independently as possible.

These are bold reforms in relation to a sensitive subject and will ensure that limited resources go further.

The question is whether Enfield Council will embrace these proposals in a timely manner, or play politics as it did with academies and the provision of sufficient primary school places.

records. The law has to change," the 37-year-old told the Advertiser. "When we are young, we all do stupid things, I understand that. But there has to be a point where you have to put a stop to this. "And we have to make sure that the government works hard to change the law to stop young offenders breaking the law again and again, because they will end up hurting someone."

The 21-year-old victim's heartbroken mother believes that the anti-knife laws currently in place failed to protect her eldest son, who was stabbed through the heart after a row over conkers on August 31 last year.

"London isn't working," she said. "Young people continue to carry knives – they are laughing at the law, laughing at the police. They think 'the police can't do anything about this because we are young' and that is just horrible."

But Jasmin, who also has two daughters and a three-year-old-son, refuses to be bitter. She said: "I never think about him [the defendant]. Every day I wake up and the first thing I think about is my children. To think about him would be a waste of my time."

She stressed that the blame for Steven's death lay with the parents of teenage thugs, not the state. "People say it's the government's fault, it is not the government – that is ridiculous," she said.

"I had Steven when I was very young," added Jasmin. "I taught him the same way my mother taught me. There are no excuses."

She was told by the prosecutor that the teenage killer could be sentenced to between nine and 15 years behind bars. She said: "It doesn't matter how many years he gets. Steven is not returning. But at least there is some sense of justice."

The 15-year-old will be sentenced on June 13.

Looking forward: Eric Rivers and his wife Davina at home in Gordon Road, Enfield

Messages of support follow TV show revamp

By Ruth McKee

THE family whose lives were turned around by a BBC TV series which transformed their home have been overwhelmed by the show of support since the programme was screened last week.

Eric and Davina Rivers and their three daughters were facing an uphill battle trying to adapt their home after Eric, 45, was diagnosed with motor neurone disease (MND).

They feared that without help he would become a prisoner in his own home, confined to one room as his mobility became increasingly limited.

But after the DIY SOS series swooped in and completely revamped the couple's two-bedroom house in Gordon Road, Enfield, their lives were dramatically turned upside down.

"I had already fallen down the stairs three times before they came and renovated the house," Eric told the Advertiser.

"The decision was being made for me by the occupational therapist – they were either going to put me downstairs or upstairs permanently and I was thinking 'I can't believe I'm going to be forced to live in one room'." But once the team from the TV show had descended on the terraced house and worked their magic, Eric said his attitude to his illness was turned around.

"The difference it has made to me is it has kept me alive," he said. "I now look forward – I say things like 'I am looking forward to the summer'. I used to look forward just to the end of the week."

The couple and their daughters have been inundated with responses to the show and Eric's Twitter following jumped from 74 to 1,300 in the space of the hour-long programme.

And the new lease of life provided by the revamp, with wheelchair-friendly features including a specially designed lift bed and an open-plan living area, has given the couple the energy to keep fighting and campaigning to improve the lives of motor neurone disease sufferers across the country, particularly in helping them get access to important communication technologies.

Davina added: "For the rest of my life I will do everything I can to raise funds and awareness for MND sufferers."

Bulge class to be set up near primary school site

By Mary McConnell

EDUCATION chiefs are keen to start a bulge class near a primary school site, but a council cabinet member has said it is not her school and she has got no authority to force a bulge class on the school.

He said that "even one bulge class" had to be a voluntary move and should not be imposed.

And, in a direct swipe at the councillor, Mr Burrowes added: "She needs to listen more to headteachers."

Responding to the MP's concerns, the deputy leader of the council Achilles Georgiou said he was surprised at Mr Burrowes's vehement opposition to the plans after his column in the Advertiser last week.

In it, the MP lobbied the council to open a school at the former Southgate Town Hall and wrote: "We now need to look urgently at how we expand some of our excellent primary schools."

"I have had meetings with Education Secretary Michael Gove and Enfield Council's director of education to make the case for more school places and flexibility with class sizes."

Mr Georgiou said: "Looking at what he said last week about it, it seems to me that David accepts the reality that excellent primary schools should expand."

Mr Georgiou stressed he was not the cabinet member responsible for education – who could not be contacted by this newspaper – but added: "From his comments last week, it would appear Mr Burrowes has answered his own question."

Speaking out: Water headteacher Liz Whitham and MP David Burrowes addressing the meeting about the need for more places at the school

Enfield Council was "looking at creating two bulge classes at St Paul's in Ringwood Way, Winchmore Hill, the Enfield Southgate MP, who is a governor at the school, hit out at the announcement.

He said: "Ms Orhan has not had any contact with teachers or governors at the school."

"It's extremely arrogant and high-handed of her to announce this in the newspaper without any consultation or discussion with teachers first."

Pet dog injured in park attack

Bitten: David Burrowes' Labrador Chalmerey

THE drive to clamp down on dangerous dogs and their owners has won a new ally after MP David Burrowes' Labrador was attacked last week by a Staffordshire bull terrier.

The Enfield Southgate MP's pet Chalmerey was seriously injured in Arnos Park when the out-of-control terrier, which was off the lead, bit his front legs.

Now he has pledged to arrange a conference on July 5 when he will bring together "all interested parties" to discuss the issue.

Mr Burrowes said the spate of dangerous dog attacks could only be tackled seriously by engaging the community.

He said: "The attack on my dog comes off the back of a number of incidents in parks which have been brought to my attention by constituents. The problem primarily is that it is not the dogs but the owners."

Mr Burrowes joined the Dogs Trust charity in calling for action to tackle irresponsible dog owners and warned that unless efforts were ramped up, responsible owners would suffer.

He added: "We have great parks that the majority use and enjoy responsibly. However, because of the irresponsibility of a minority of dog owners, some parks have become no-go areas for families with young children and other more responsible dog owners."

Fostering offers kids a second chance in life

By Ruth McKee

TWO heads are nervously bent together giggling as a photographer asks them to show off their best sides to the camera.

To an outsider, Lonnie Young and Jodie Appleyard's easy laughter together can only be the result of a close mother-daughter bond.

But Jodie and Lonnie aren't related by blood or marriage. Jodie, who is now 18, arrived as a fully formed teenager in Lonnie's world, in need of a stable, loving home.

"She's like my best friend," admits Jodie straightaway, shyly looking at her foster mum.

And with a quick flick of her hair, she tells the Advertiser about the moment she realised this foster placement was so much more than somewhere to kill time before branching out on her own when she turned 18.

Jodie says: "One day me and Lonnie were in the car and there was a tracksuit in a window of a shop."

"I said I really liked the tracksuit and then, one day, when I came home, that tracksuit was on the stairs."

That moment clearly still lives with Jodie and her eyes shine at the memory of the moment she felt she became part of Lonnie's family.

"A major part of what young people feel is that they're not listened to. With me, they don't have to tell me what they want for Christmas," adds Lonnie.

That goes a long way to explaining why she is considered something of a wonder woman with teenage girls who might need a little something extra from a foster placement.

"I'm known for the difficult ones," Lonnie admits before brushing away praise for what she does.

"But in all the years I have fostered it is never the young person's fault why they are in care."

I'm known for the difficult ones. But in all the years I have fostered it is never the young person's fault why they are taken into care

While Lonnie's brand of listening and talking to her charges has worked wonders on teenage girls, Christine Hippolyte, a fellow foster carer from Enfield, admits that at the moment her home is dominated by the different challenges accompanying teenage boys.

And she admits that teaching a house full of boys to remember to sort their laundry and turn off lights behind them has been an uphill struggle.

"I tell them 'it's your home, it is our home and we have to respect the home'," she says laughing. "And yes, I have to spend time teaching them to do things like turning off the lights."

Both Lonnie and Christine have biological children, who have supported them with fostering.

Lonnie describes how her own daughters become like sisters to her foster daughters.

And for Christine, it was her children who had seen her raise, educate and love them single-handedly, who urged their mum to take in troubled youngsters or kids in need of a home – and eventually she agreed.

Both Lonnie and Christine's stories of giving hope, love and a refuge to young people in need of a home emerge in the midst of Enfield's Fostering Fortnight.

The two-week period sees council officers trying to boost the profile of foster care in the borough and show how important it is.

But behind all the messages of what fostering offers for a family or a child, the unshakeable bond between Lonnie and Jodie probably speaks loudest about the powerful change fostering can bring about in an individual's life.

For more information about fostering, call 020 8379 2831 or email fostering@enfield.gov.uk ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

Recalling refugees who spied on Nazi prisoners

By Kim Inam

A PLAY about the work of Jewish refugees for the British Intelligence Service at Trent Park has been commissioned after an award from the Heritage Lottery Fund.

The fund has allocated £95,000 to the Pascal Theatre Company, working with Middlesex University, The Jewish Military Museum, The Jewish Museum and the Wiener Library, to train 20 young volunteers to carry out research into the work of German and Austrian refugees who translated the conversations of Nazi prisoners of war held at the mansion house during World War II.

The research is being turned into a play to be performed at Trent Park on July 22 and 23.

The project, called The Secret Listeners, will show how the refugees provided vital information thanks to their extensive knowledge of the German language and cultural traditions.

They recorded and made detailed transcripts of private conversations between senior Nazi officers, which yielded valuable strategic information for the Allies.

It included to what extent the German army was aware of and implicated in the Holocaust.

The 84 prisoners, mostly generals, lived a relatively comfortable existence in the mansion, previously the home of the Sassoon family.

The intelligence service's plan was to make the prisoners feel relaxed enough to talk freely, unaware the building was bugged.

They were allowed to walk freely in the grounds but were asked not to try to escape.

Most of the research volunteers are expected to be recruited from the university's students as well as from members of the North London Jewish Community. They will have access to transcripts of the original recordings, which are held in the National Archives.

They will work with professional screenwriter Adam Ganz, from Royal Holloway, University of London, whose father was one of the original secret listeners. He said: "I am very excited about the chance to work with volunteers to make a site-specific drama from the exact words spoken in the same rooms more than 70 years ago."

The play will also be performed at The Jewish Museum in Albert Street, Camden, and a recording will be made to be kept at both the university and museum.

SUPPORT YOUR LOCAL Church

Enfield Evangelical Free Church

On Christmas Day 2011, after 8 years meeting in Enfield County School, the congregation of Enfield Evangelical Free Church (EEFC) started to use their new building in Cecil Road. Until 2003 this local church met in the building known locally as "Cecil Hall" (where Argos now stands). Cecil Hall was compulsorily purchased to make way for the Palace Exchange Development. The new building has opened debt free, funded by compensation for Cecil Hall and the generous giving of the congregation. Throughout its history, EEFC has been a community of followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, learning together from Him and seeking to serve the local community by proclaiming the Lord Jesus as God's good news for all. The Bible is at the heart of all the activities of the church, in addition to its Sunday Services. 2012 has seen the start of two key initiatives. The first is the Hub on Tuesday evenings, when all ages gather for a meal together followed by time studying the Bible and prayer. The second is the Way In coffee shop, currently open on Thursday and Friday mornings. All are welcome to come and sample the coffee and visit the building at 79 Cecil Road, Enfield.

'Take the 'Knife to my brain tumour'

Woman denied pioneering treatment and has to wait instead for potentially risky operation

By Daniel O'Brien

A WOMAN has criticised NHS bosses for denying her a simple procedure that would destroy her brain tumour, forcing her to undergo a potentially more serious and expensive operation in the future.

Doctors at St Bartholomew's Hospital in the City of London had recommended that Angela Steel, of Cecil Road, Southgate, be treated for her benign acoustic neuroma using a CyberKnife machine.

The non-invasive procedure uses beams of radiation to kill tumour cells.

But health chiefs have refused to fund the treatment, claiming there is not enough evidence that it will be any more effective than other procedures that are available.

In the past year Bart's has successfully treated 15 acoustic neuromas using the CyberKnife.

The 66-year-old said that she would have to wait until the tumour growing on the acoustic nerve next to her ear was big enough to be surgically removed.

The hairdresser, who was diagnosed in May 2007, said that waiting for the operation had left her at unnecessary risk.

"It is a very serious and very delicate operation," she said.

"There are facial nerves around it and if it touches any of them it can cause facial paralysis.

"CyberKnife might be expensive but the operation, I was told, would cost very much the same and there would be after care."

Mrs Steel added that delaying her treatment was causing her and her family unnecessary stress.

"I want to get back to my life and get this treatment dealt with," she said.

She is appealing against the decision and is due to meet the North Central London NHS Trust on Thursday.

A spokeswoman for trust said: "We take the needs of individual patients very seriously indeed, but we are required to balance these against the needs of the whole population we serve when we are spending NHS resources." daniel.obrien@nlhnews.co.uk

Blind charity turns 90 with celebratory lunch

By Daniel O'Brien

A CHARITY that provides help, advice and training to blind, partially sighted and deafblind people has celebrated its 90th birthday.

Staff, volunteers and service users from Barnet And Enfield Association For The Blind came together at Vita Et Pax Church, in Peace Close, Oakwood, on Monday to mark the anniversary with a celebratory lunch.

Enfield and Barnet mayors, Kate Anolue and Brian Schama, were also on hand to pay tribute to the organisation, which was launched to treat the many servicemen who returned from World War I having lost their sight.

Mrs Anolue praised the "wonderful work" of the organisation's staff and many volunteers.

She told the party: "I am quite emotional so I find it difficult to bring out my words. But well done to the volunteers for making life much easier for all these people."

Isaac John, of Gilpin Crescent, Upper Edmonton, said the organisation had helped him continue a normal life since he started losing his sight in 1996.

The 73-year-old said the work of his home visitor Mark Scales had improved his life dramatically.

He said: "I am a Christian so he helps me get to church, he takes me to the shops and he helps me buy things. He is very kind."

Mr Scales, 37, who is partially sighted himself, said he and Mr John were a good match.

"He's a fun guy," he said. "I think we help each other out because he is such good company."

Michael Smith, who has been chosen to play football for England at this summer's Paralympics, was at the party.

Along with his twin brother Daniel, the 20-year-old is almost completely blind because of a rare genetic condition which only emerged last year.

Michael said the charity had been invaluable in his rehabilitation.

"They were incredible to me," he said. "I did all of my vegetable chopping training classes with them."

Andrew Cox, chief executive officer of Middlesex Association For The Blind, said the charity aimed to help anyone who believes they have sight problems, whether registered blind or not.

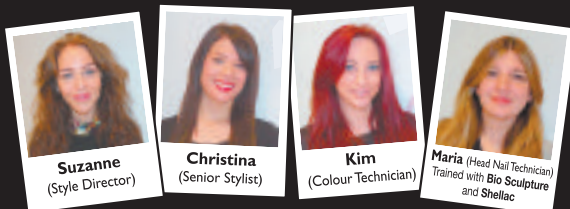

"If you think you need help, we will provide it," he said.

WELCOME to the latest edition of Families In The Loop, which this month has a distinctly British feel around it as we gear up for the Queen's diamond jubilee.

On June 5, Queen Elizabeth II will be celebrating 60 years on the throne. And Her Majesty won't be the only one in a festive mood, with hundreds of people getting ready for street parties across Enfield and Barnet.

On pages 5-7 we speak to two party organisers ahead of the big day – and how throwing the events has helped bring their communities together.

There's also a round-up of other jubilee-themed events, recipes and a range of great ideas if you fancy marking the long bank holiday weekend with some retail therapy.

And on page 3 we've got an interview with the upholstery company which will be covering the throne for the royal barge which will carry Her Majesty down the river during the Thames Diamond Jubilee Pageant.

What better way to celebrate than to raise a pint of British beer? On page 4 we meet Andy Moffat, who gave up a career in banking to open the Redemption Brewing Company. From an inconspicuous industrial unit in Edmonton, it is now producing around 10,000 pints of beer a week supplied to up to 250 pubs.

What could be more traditionally British than morris dancing? It dates back to the 15th century and is a staple at many summer fairs, with bells, handkerchiefs and bearded men delighting onlookers.

Now you can try your hand – or feet – at this most quintessentially English of traditions at the N21 Festival. That is just one of many fun events on the bill at the week-long event, as we found out on page 8.

On the same page we speak with the man behind the Enfield Pageant of Motoring, which will be kick-starting the jubilee celebrations this weekend with a 1952-themed display of cars including Morris and Austins.

With half-term also approaching, on pages 10-11 we've brought together some ideas for keeping your children entertained and out of mischief – whether they love sport or the theatre.

Looking further ahead, the Latitude Festival promises to be one of the highlights of the summer calendar.

And on this page we are offering one lucky reader the chance to win a pair of standard weekend tickets to the music and arts spectacular in Suffolk.

So we hope you enjoy everything we have in store and good luck, enjoy and we'd love to hear your feedback by emailing families@nlhnews.co.uk

Double checking: Joseph Bennett, left, production designer for the royal barge, and Stephen Chapman, director of the upholstery firm, talking about some of the seating for the Spirit of Chartwell

Barnet firm makes sure Her Majesty is sitting comfortably

By Daniel O'Brien

MANY residents will have been disappointed when they heard the Queen would not be setting foot on Barnet soil in either of her two diamond jubilee tours of the capital.

Her Majesty went to Walthamstow, Redbridge and Harrow in March and then visited Bromley, Merton and Richmond earlier this month.

So it should come as some solace that she will be placing something far more important on High Barnet-made upholstery as she glides up the river for her Thames Diamond Jubilee Pageant.

As the royal barge, Spirit Of Chartwell, leads the 1,000-boat flotilla on Sunday, June 3, Stephen Chapman of upholsterers and soft furnishers Albert E Chapman in Plantagenet Road will have the satisfaction of knowing that thanks to him and his team, HRH will be sitting comfortably on her throne.

"It is a big honour and an important commission," said the managing director, who in March was tasked with covering two thrones, plus around 100 seats, with top-quality red velvet.

Up to a million spectators will line the banks of the river and many more will be watching at home as the 200ft-long gilted luxury cruiser makes its way from from Cadogan Pier towards Tower Bridge.

It is all part of the celebrations to mark the Queen's 60 years in power.

By royal command: Two craftsmen at Albert E Chapman working on the seating for the Spirit Of Chartwell

But speaking to us with less than two weeks to go until the big day, Mr Chapman had no time to think about the importance of the event.

"I will not be finished until the end of this week," he said. "It is a bit complicated and there's quite a lot to do. There are two thrones at the front with the UK coat of arms on.

"Banquette seating on either side of the thrones and behind that there is a horseshoe-shaped banquette.

"For its purpose it is fairly elaborate, as befits the occasion."

But having held a Royal Warrant for more than 20 years, the employees of the 82-year-old family business are not the type to be overwhelmed.

"The fact that it is for the jubilee doesn't really add pressure," said Mr Chapman.

"I think we have got the skills and we have got the ability. It is taking a bit of putting together but we will make it by hook or by crook."

Mr Chapman is unsure of what will happen to the boat - which was designed by production designer Joseph Bennett and is covered in more than 90 metres of red velvet - after the pageant.

"It would be a shame if it is completely destroyed, but I don't think that will happen," said Mr Chapman.

"I would like to see it put in a museum. It would be lovely for the public if they put it somewhere they can go and see. But that is not in our jurisdiction at all."

Beer's one that I made earlier

By Jim Brock

WHEN most men have a mid-life crisis they buy a sports car, grow a ponytail or try and relive their youth by chasing younger women.

Former banker Andy Moffat decided to start his own brewery.

The 39-year-old Glaswegian traded in a career in banking to start the Redemption Brewing Company.

Andy signed a lease on an industrial unit in Edmonton in September 2009, brought in some heavy-duty brewing equipment from Slater's brewery in Stafford, and in January 2010 brewed his first beers – Redemption Pale Ale and Urban Dusk.

Two years later he and his team are now producing six different ales and have carved out a reputation as one of London's top breweries.

Andy said: "I was fed up in the world of banking. I wanted to make something – something to do with beer, because I love beer."

"At that point there were not many breweries in London, and none in north London."

If you didn't know where to find

Redemption, you wouldn't know it existed either, tucked away on an industrial estate not far from White Hart Lane.

Andy said: "I looked at a couple of places a bit further north, but in the end it was important to have a London postcode."

From humble beginnings, and Andy juggling every job going, from head brewer to cleaner, Redemption now has five members of staff, with other avid home brewers often in touch to offer their time for free.

Andy Smith and Ed Taylor help to produce the beer, Ehren West delivers it and Andy Moffat's wife Sam deals with the office side of the business.

The former BBC newsreader is now a self-confessed spreadsheet goddess, and says she has even developed a taste for beer – the darker the better. She said: "I felt I had to know about them [the beers] when people rang up."

Redemption now brews three days a week – Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday – producing between 9,000 and 10,000 pints.

They are supplied to up to 250 pubs, 70-100 of which are regular customers, with 95 per cent of those boozers inside the M25.

With business booming – and the brewery hopefully beginning to turn a profit soon – Andy is investing in a new fermenting tank.

That will enable Redemption to up its output to between 15,000-20,000 pints a week, and hopefully take on an extra full-time and part-time member of staff.

Not bad for someone who started off making his own beer at home.

It's clear Andy loves what he does – making good beer for people to enjoy at the pub.

That's why Redemption won't be producing a special beer for the Queen's jubilee.

Andy said: "The jubilee's not really our scene. We've got a younger image – we want to be accessible to all ages."

"We're all about making good, well-hopped beer. Lots of flavour but accessible."

"We want the beer to be complex but not the type of beer where you will just have a half pint."

"We're all about making beer to be drunk at the pub."

Andy says he wants Redemption to be thought of like "the local football team for north London". Certainly the brewery is trying to Cheers!

Redemption
head brewer

do its bit for the community – as well as the planet.

The 300-400kg of used malt from each brewing process are taken away to feed horses, while the hops ("subtle" English, "aromatic and flavoursome" New Zealand and "punchy" American) end up on allotments in Enfield.

The brewery tries to use as little water as possible and all electricity comes from renewable sources, despite being more costly.

He said: "It's ten to 15 per cent more expensive but I like doing it."

Redemption isn't available in bottles yet – it's in the pipeline but Andy still prefers producing a beer to be drunk at the pub – so why not treat yourself to the boozier?

And you can even feel that you're doing your bit for the planet and the local economy as you drink your pint of Redemption.

Give your wardrobe a patriotic makeover

IF YOU were planning on dressing up for next month's jubilee, happily you don't have to take the tacky souvenir route to flaunt your patriotic side.

The style world has come up trumps with a wardrobe that's fit for a queen.

Fly the flag

For those in the heart-on-sleeve camp, you can't beat some Union Jack chic.

Put your pins firmly on parade with House of Holland for Pretty Polly's Rule Britannia statement flag tights, £15 (www.pretty-polly.co.uk).

Jubilee 2012 meets Spice Girl Geri Halliwell circa 1997 with Simmi's patriotic Union Jack platform boots, £38 (www.simmishoes.com).

For evening glamour, pop your royal trinkets in Lulu Guinness' Felicity sequinned Union Jack oversized clutch, £275 (www.luluguinness.com).

To give a refined nod to the summer occasions, adopt a nautical approach with an all red, white and blue palette. Boden, Joules, and The White Stuff are British heritage brands with just the right take on celebration style.

Playful patriotic

Adopt some humour into your wardrobe with a playful take

Dog gone: A corgi jumper from Louche

on the jubilee – there are recurring themes playing tribute to Her Majesty this summer, including dogs and crowns.

Go down the patriotic route with a British bulldog. Dorothy Perkins has perched a glitzy crown and necklace on its dog motif top, £16 (0845 121 4515).

We all know the Queen loves her Corgis so try Louche's strokeable Windsor Corgi jumper, £45, (www.joythestore.com).

You don't have to marry a prince to wear a crown – try a top instead, like

M&Co's crown print blouse, £25 (www.mandco.com).

And if you're planning to put your feet up for the jubilee period, pamper your regal feet in Damart's jubilee midnight blue slippers, £15 (www.damart.co.uk).

Crown jewels

Okay, so your bling is never going to compare to the Queen's historic pieces, but a flash of patriotic accessories will always be a crowd pleaser.

Perfect for street party chic, Tatty Devine has a red, white and blue bunting necklace, £29, to celebrate the occasion.

Practise your royal wave to show off Tresor Paris' jubilee bracelet wrist candy with its crystal spheres of red, white and blue, £149 (www.tresorparis.com).

But in typical British fashion, we're bound to insist on using our barbecues – come rain or shine. So, it's time to start thinking about what to cook. After all, next week is National Barbecue Week...

For a truly smoky, barbecue taste, try Tabasco® Chipotle Pepper Sauce.

It can be used as a marinade, on its own, or added to all sorts of sauces and dips. Its distinctive, smoky taste will give any barbecue favourite a saucy kick!

This chipotle barbecue ribs recipe will definitely tickle your tastebuds.

CARE home residents have been busy making bunting and decorations for a jubilee party in their back yard.

Residents of Eastbrook House, in Eastbrook Avenue, Edmonton, have invited residents from the neighbouring cul-de-sacs of St Michael's Avenue and St Andrew's Road to the party on the extra bank holiday on June 5.

The celebration is one of 16 to which Enfield Council awarded community grants of between £250 and £400.

Teacher and resident Carol Ellul helped organise a party at the care home for last year's royal wedding.

She said: "People often leave their front doors and get straight into their cars and go these days. But after last year's party we are seeing more people are stopping to talk to each other."

"A lot of people have lived here for 30 or 40 years and they are moving on, so this party is a chance for new neighbours to get meet each other."

The funding has helped pay for a singer, bouncy castle and a souvenir key ring for all attendees.

Residents are invited to bring some food and enjoy a glass of Pimm's at the party from 2pm to 6pm in Eastbrook House's car park.

Residents digging out the bunting for jubilee street parties

Putting up the bunting: Janine Young is organising a diamond jubilee street party in Hemington Avenue

FRIENDS and neighbours living in Hemington Avenue will be among the hundreds of Barnet residents praying for sun as they mark the diamond jubilee with their own street party.

On Monday, June 4, for one afternoon only, the small road off Friern Barnet Lane will be transformed by flags and bunting in celebration of Her Majesty's 60th year on the throne.

Throughout the day residents will be treated to lunch, live music, and a dog show before releasing 100 balloons into the atmosphere.

Party organiser Janine Young decided to hold the event after Barnet Council offered to grant permission and provide advice and insurance cover for any jubilee street party with enough local support.

Ms Young, who moved to the street a year ago, said that she wanted to do something to bring the community together.

"It is a really lovely street," she said. "Coming in I was so surprised by how friendly everyone was and I wanted to build on that."

"One of my first memories was having the 1977 silver jubilee street party and I wanted to give that to the other children."

The 42-year-old mum-of-two started planning the event a month ago with the help of around ten neighbours.

But as the big day draws near, many more residents are already getting into the community spirit by volunteering to bake cakes or to buy materials for the street party.

She said: "It has helped everyone get to know each other as people are talking and getting excited about it."

"We are even setting up a neighbourhood watch scheme as a result of it."

Motoring pageant shows patriotic spirit for jubilee

THE annual Enfield Pageant of Motoring will be kick-starting the jubilee celebrations in Enfield this weekend.

Now in its 35th year, the pageant at the King George V Playing Fields off Great Cambridge Road, Enfield, will include a special display of vehicles from 1952 to mark the year Queen Elizabeth II came to the throne.

Cars on display will include British-made Morris and Austins.

The show, which began as a fundraiser to set up the Whitewebbs Museum of Transport in Whitewebbs Road, Enfield, will also include a motor jumble for enthusiasts to buy parts.

There will also be display of American cars and hot rods, supported by 1940s and 50s lifestyle magazine Milkcow.

A number of the museum's 40 cars and motorbikes will be on display at the pageant, including a 1912 Belsize fire engine and a 1926 Overland truck.

Colin Spong, president of the Enfield and District Veteran Vehicle Society, said: "The fire engine is the eldest operating Belsize in the country and I think it's the sole survivor."

Mr Spong said there is a growing enthusiasm for the pageant. He said: "There is a lot of interest from people in the cars from the 60s and 70s."

"People are now able to afford to buy those cars that they remember from their childhood, now they are no longer paying for their children and mortgages."

Mr Spong added that he had an admiration for modern cars.

He said: "They are so efficient and well built, they last forever. Early cars were high maintenance items – it was a whole different scenario."

"In the past the cars were mechanical, now they are computer-controlled."

The show runs from Friday to Sunday.

The Whitewebbs Museum of Transport is open to the public every Tuesday and many weekends during the summer.

Group tours are available by arrangement.

N21 FESTIVAL

Test your morris dancing skills at festival on green

By Ruth McKee

IN this season of celebrating all things British, could there be anything more quintessentially English than trying morris dancing on the green?

If you fancy giving skipping with bells a try, then the N21 Festival in Winchmore Hill next month is the ideal way to while away a sunny afternoon.

As well as getting the chance to try morris dancing, country dancing and taking part in a vintage tea dance, festivalgoers can parade their pooch at a family dog show or search for long lost treasure in a hunt through Winchmore Hill.

Or if that all sounds far too energetic for a (hopefully) sunny summer's day, you could always spend an afternoon with a traditional cream tea.

The week-long festival is designed to celebrate the centenary of Henrietta Cresswell's history of the area, Winchmore Hill: Memories Of A Lost Village.

It was published in 1912 and detailed a "fayre" that was held on the green in Winchmore Hill. Festival organisers hope the events and entertainment will bring the community together over the course of the week.

And they have decided that all the money raised in the events will go to Noah's Ark Children's Hospice, the Alzheimer's Society and The National Autistic Society.

The event is being run with the help of volunteers from the community including resident Nikki Ploutarhou, who told us how excited she is about the upcoming festivities.

She said: "It's such a lovely thing to bring the community together. There's such a mixed age group in the area. I think it's a great thing."

The community celebration lasts from June 16 to 23 and a full festival schedule and details of the events can be found at www.n21.net

Green and pleasant land: The Fake Grass Company's showroom in Crews Hill

Faking it is so much easier

THE hosepipe ban might have been enough to get gardeners tearing their hair out in despair.

But all the recent rain hasn't been much help either, despite the constant mantra that "we really need it". Lawns have gone from looking yellow and patchy to wild, untamed jungles that would give Dennis The Menace's hair a run for its money.

Take a few tentative steps into the wild greenery and you'll soon find yourself trailing squidgy mud back into the house.

So what's the solution? Artificial grass.

No more mowing, worrying about bald or mossy patches or watering.

Gary Wilson of The Fake Grass Company, which has opened a new showroom in Crews Hill, said: "It's really maintenance-free. You need to sweep it off or wash it occasionally, but that's about it.

"It's great for elderly people, because they don't have to lug a lawnmower around, or families and people with pets, because it doesn't get really muddy and your dog can't dig a hole in it. And it means you can use your garden all year round."

Anyone with sore memories of playing sport on astroturf will be relieved to know that the new high-tech fake grass means there's no danger of any unsightly burns.

It is also allergy-free, UV-treated so it doesn't bleach in the sunlight, and the drainage system means no puddles in wet weather. What's more, it looks like grass and feels springy to the touch.

That's unless you go for one of the reds, blues and other colours which people choose to surround paddling pools, for decking or even indoors.

The fake grass starts at £15.99 a square metre and the team, led by Gary, can do the full installation – which even involves taking away your old lawn.

The Fake Grass Company is based at Browns Garden Centre in Theobalds Park Road, Crews Hill, Enfield, EN2 9DG.

FAMILY ANNOUNCEMENTS

Len resembled TV grump Alf but spent his life fundraising

By Ruth McKee

A CELEBRITY look-a-like, who was regularly mistaken for notorious TV grump Alf Garnett, passed away earlier this month.

Len Albury, who had lived in Edmonton all his life, died at North Middlesex University Hospital on May 8 following a short illness. He was 86.

His wife of 42 years, Maria, told the Advertiser how passers-by regularly stopped her husband in the street and demanded an autograph, rarely believing his insistence that he just happened to look a lot like the controversial comic character played by Warren Mitchell.

"He loved it, he really loved the work," said Mr Albury's widow, describing how her husband raised money for good causes including the Great Ormond Street Hospital Children's Charity, making appearances in his guise of the star of BBC sitcoms Till Death Us Do Part and In Sickness And In Health.

"It all started where he used to work as an operating theatre technician," said Mrs Albury.

"The people said he really looked like the character and then other people started to comment on it."

Although Len's physical resemblance to Mitchell's bad-tempered anti-hero was striking, in real life he devoted his time to raising money for charity.

And, according to friend John Dench, he was always ready to "get the money rolling in" for causes from Comic Relief to fundraisers for the specialist children's hospital.

Happy Hammers: Len Albury with former West Ham United captain Billy Bonds

Like the fictional TV character,

Len was a devoted supporter of West Ham United Football Club and worked with the club in much of his charity work.

His funeral is being held today at 3.30pm at Enfield Crematorium in Great Cambridge Road, Enfield.

Raise a cuppa to helping seriously ill young adults

Restaurant News

BROOKMANS pub in Potters Bar will be launching a new charity initiative tomorrow with a jubilee-themed tea party.

People from across the borough are being invited to throw their own royal tea party throughout June in aid of the Willow Foundation, which supports seriously ill 16 to 40-year-olds.

According to the charity, people should be turning their royal street parties into charitable affairs.

So, as well as making the most of the jubilee weekend, they will also be doing their bit as part of the Take Time For Tea fundraising drive.

The launch tea party takes place at Brookmans, in Brookmans Park, from 3.30pm to 5.30pm tomorrow, with tea and cakes on offer.

The Willow Foundation was founded in 1999 by former Arsenal and Scotland goalkeeper Bob Wilson and his wife Megs, following

Tea time: Lloyd Willis, manager of Brookmans, and Linsey Taylor, senior community fundraiser for the Willow Foundation, launching the charity initiative the death of their daughter Anna from cancer aged just 31.

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

The charity funds days out for younger adults coping with serious illnesses.

To date, Willow has provided more than 8,500 special days for people suffering with diseases including cancer, motor neurone and Huntington's.

Lloyd Willis, manager of Brookmans, said: "Take Time For Tea is a great way to get together over a leisurely cuppa or a more formal tea party to raise money for a fantastic cause, and we're pleased to be able to help. We'll be supporting the Willow Foundation in their efforts to make this year the most successful yet.

"And we look forward to welcoming familiar faces and new guests to Brookmans to enjoy a cup of tea together."

Elephant man: One of Julia Donaldson's creations is brought to life by Scamp Theatre

Tiddler squashes in with Smartest Giant

By Mary McConnell

THE award-winning team behind Scamp Theatre will present its latest collaboration with the creators of The Gruffalo, Julia Donaldson and Axel Scheffler, at artsdepot next month.

Tiddler And Other Terrific Tales is a brand-new show based on the books by Children's Laureate Donaldson and illustrated by Scheffer.

The show, billed as a magical collection of Donaldson's most popular titles, has been adapted for the stage by the London-based company

It is aimed at youngsters aged three and above and features many of Donaldson's much-loved tales, including Tiddler, The Smartest Giant In Town, A Squash And A Squeeze and Monkey Puzzle.

Under the sea, over land, on the farm and in the jungle, these tales are woven together with music, songs, puppets and a host of colourful and delightful characters.

Scamp Theatre, which has previously brought Aesop's Fables to the stage at the North Finchley venue, was founded by Julia Sutherland and Louise Callow in 2003.

Tiddler And Other Terrific Tales will be performed at the venue in Tally Ho Corner, North Finchley, on June 8, 9 and 10.

Tickets are £10 and a family ticket for four is £34. To book, call 020 8369 5454.

Sailing from Tilbury

Enjoy all the magic and wonder of some great value 'No-flying' cruise holidays from London Tilbury in 2012 and 2013, on board elegant, ever-popular Marco Polo.

There really is nothing finer than a holiday that combines fascinating days and exciting nights, interesting destinations, the company of friendly faces and the comforts of an excellent hotel. This is what we have on offer on board Marco Polo – and at superb value prices too!

The ship's 2012 programme includes cruises to a wide range of destinations, beginning with a winter-warming six-week voyage to the magical Amazon and the Caribbean, and a trio of sailings in search of the mysterious 'Northern Lights'. The spring and summer offer a wonderful selection of fjordland cruises, glorious circumnavigations of Britain and Ireland, some shorter 'taster' cruises, the Baltic Cities and a summertime journey south to the mid-Atlantic Azores. Marco Polo will also mark the centenary of the voyage of RMS Titanic with a commemorative cruise to the ports associated with the ill-fated liner.

We look forward to the pleasure of your company!

Skolars undone by leaders' late surge

THE London Skolars conceded five converted tries in the last 13 minutes to slump to a 42-12 defeat at table-topping Barrow Raiders in Co-Operative Championship One on Sunday.

The Skolars more than held their own against the leaders for much of the contest and looked to have a genuine chance of causing an upset when the score was tied at 12-12 with time running out.

But Barrow suddenly cut loose and James Finch forced his way over the line to put them back in front in the 67th minute.

And this score broke the Skolars' brave resistance as Liam Campbell, Andy Ballard, Dan Toal and Ruari McGoff all touched down in the last eight minutes to give a rather unrealistic look to the final scoreline. Ryan Shaw converted all the tries.

Earlier, the visitors had taken a shock lead on seven minutes when Mike Worrincy finished off a break by Neil Thorman to score the opening try of the afternoon.

Dylan Skee added the conversion and John Paxton nearly extended their advantage when he was held up just short of the line.

A Campbell score got Barrow back on level terms prior to the interval, and Liam Harrison then touched down on 44 minutes to put the hosts ahead for the first time.

The Skolars hit back as Rob Thomas crashed over from close range, but their efforts counted for nothing as they were undone by Barrow's late onslaught.

The London Skolars host basement side Gateshead Thunder on Sunday (2pm).

Staying positive: Jermain Defoe feels Spurs should be proud of their efforts over the season

Ireland impresses as contest is drawn

A SUPERB bowling performance from Anthony Ireland helped Hornsey to pick up their first point of the season in the top flight of the Middlesex County Cricket League as they secured a losing draw from a thrilling match at home to Teddington.

Batting first, newly promoted Hornsey amassed 174, with Kirit Makwana making 52 and Martin Tucker adding a quick-fire 39 not out off 32 balls.

This total looked like being enough to give them victory as Middlesex seamer Ireland (7-65) ripped through the Teddington top order to leave them reeling at 85-6.

But they were thwarted by James Fear's brilliant unbeaten 92 as the visitors managed to make it to 167-8 – with their faster scoring rate enabling them to claim the winning draw.

Meanwhile, North Middlesex also ended with a losing draw from their trip to Acton in the second division.

Kaleem Hussein (4-44) was the pick of the visitors' bowlers as Acton made 196-7 batting first, and the visitors could only make 158-8 in reply – with Damien Wall top-scoring with 39.

Third division action saw North London claim a losing draw from their match at Kenton, while Highgate suffered a two-wicket defeat at Barnes.

Highgate made 175-8 batting first and looked set to win the game until Jarrod Schmidt hit a remarkable 43 not out off just 17 balls to guide Barnes to 178-8.

Hornsey host Eastcote on Saturday, while North Middlesex entertain Harrow Town, North London visit Barnes and Highgate are at home to Uxbridge.

SPURS' AGONY

By Dominique Stafford

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR'S dreams of playing in next season's Champions League were crushed on Saturday night when Chelsea's dramatic victory in the final of this year's competition condemned them to a spot in the Europa League.

Spurs' fourth-placed finish in the Premier League would normally have earned them a spot in the final qualifying round of the Champions League – but Chelsea's triumph means that they automatically get in as holders and has led to Tottenham being demoted to the secondary competition.

Having been third for so much of the campaign, the failure to qualify will come as a particularly bitter blow for Spurs, who may now struggle to keep hold of the likes of Luka Modric and Gareth Bale.

However, striker Emmanuel Adebayor – who spent last season on loan at the club from Manchester City – has handed Tottenham a boost this week by indicating that he would like to move to White Hart Lane on a permanent basis.

Meanwhile, Jermain Defoe – who has been named in England manager Roy Hodgson's squad for the European Championships – believes that Spurs should be proud of their efforts over the campaign even though they missed out on a spot in the Champions League.

"We wanted to finish in the top four at the start of the season and we've done that," he said. "That's what we wanted to achieve, so credit to the players and everyone at the club. Everyone should be proud."

"I'm delighted to have made the England squad. I knew last summer that I had a massive season coming up, and I worked hard on my fitness to be as sharp as possible."

"I thought the 2010 World Cup was a fantastic experience, and to have the opportunity to represent England at another major tournament is amazing."

"I always remember watching the tournaments on TV, watching Euro 96, and to be part of it now is something special."
